

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE

by the noted author
Idah McGlone Gibson

Before I wrote John I received a telegram from him saying he was coming down on the afternoon train. Evidently someone had telegraphed him I was ill again, for his wife said: "I am very much worried about you. Be sure and take care of yourself until I can come and take care of you." I don't want John to come. I was a coward. I knew if he came and took me in his arms and said the nice things to me that only he can say I should love him again with all my heart. Strange isn't it, that a coming child weaves a magnetic chord between a man and a woman when they have nothing else in common. Before we were married the glamour of love was over us both. We talked of nothing except ourselves and each other. In that whirlwind of three weeks of John's courtship every one of my brain faculties lulled to sleep by the magnetism of his presence.

One of the Reasons

It seems to me that this is one of the reasons why the modern marriage is so often unsuccessful; neither really knows the other, even though the courtship lasts much longer than mine.

Love is one thing and married life is quite another.

I have come to feel that Alice is right. She has many interests besides marriage which takes up her time. She has become interested in the affairs of the modern woman and her husband is perfectly willing that she should be. They are good pals and friends, but I do not think they have ever been lovers. I am quite sure that the modern novel, the modern drama and above all, the modern movie exerts a bad influence upon modern young men and women. They are always preaching—Love is all.

You see, we Americans are such emotional people. In no other country in the world is delicious and romantic love deemed the only thing that is necessary to a successful marriage. In fact, delicious and romantic love is not deemed necessary at all to a successful marriage anywhere except in America. The French sharply define love as one thing and marriage another.

During my stay abroad it seemed to me that I had never known a happier and more contented home life than in the houses of my friends—most of whose marriages had been made French fashion by the fathers and mothers for the sake of financial or family reasons.

But if one should speak of a marriage of this kind among American people one would be considered a love heretic and the listener would look upon you as one just moral in your views of the most important relations of life. However, many of the modern women are coming to feel as the French do. I know, for when two or three of them are gathered together there is always at least one if not two who have very radical ideas on the subject of marriage.

The other day when Alice and I were talking, he said, "I believe in making marriage very hard and divorce very easy." When I repeated this to John he was horror struck. He had the old idea, the old traditions in regard to marriage. A woman should cleave to the man "until death do us part," while for a man, if "his heart is true to Pol," nothing else matters. He is free to love as did the old sailor in the song, a girl in every port.

We rush into matrimony so blindly and it is a partnership like no other in the world. There is no other important partnership that one can not break honorably if one finds that it is unbearable for any reason. But, notwithstanding modern thought has gone a great way in this broadening direction, yet more or less suspicion always attaches to the divorced woman.

Tastes Very Much Alike

Today I feel that if I were absolutely free I would never want to marry another man, and yet I believe that I could really be very happy with Charlie, although I never thought of marrying him. In many ways our tastes are very much alike, and yet I have never cared for him in the way that I have loved John. Karl Shepard has flattered me with his attentions, but he, too, I can see, cares for me only in the way that John did.

Today I want no more of the turmoil and thrills of this thing that we call love. I want to rest and to be quiet and to be alone. Several years ago, I read a poem about a woman who said that she wanted to be alone and free, to feel how her back could bear burdens and how she could stand upright on the wild moors and buffet the winds. She said she was tired of the firelight and the comfort and the quiet of her home, yet the poem ended:

"And at your kiss I grow contented so."

This is my case exactly, and in such a mood I wait for John.

CHAFING DISH BRINGS POSSIBILITY FOR CHEERIER KIND OF INFORMAL PARTIES

By SISTER MARY.

The housekeeper who must entertain without a maid, or the girl who would charm in a frilly apron cooking palate tickling pitfalls for man, will find the chafing dish invaluable for use at small informal parties.

The chafing dish should be put on a tray to prevent all damage from heat or hot water. All ingredients used in the cookery are prepared beforehand and arranged on a tray conveniently near the cook.

All of the courses are put on the table or served from a tea cart or side table. The salad may be molded and garnished on a platter and served at the opposite end of the table from the chafing dish. The dessert is served individually and may be in position on the table. If a fruit cup or soup is served it should be on the table when the party commences. This makes it necessary for the hostess to leave the table but once.

Menus for the Chafing Dish.
Fruit cup, chicken à la reine, stuffed tomato salad, radishes, finger rolls, chocolate roll cake with whipped cream, coffee.

Asparagus eggs, pineapple salad, brown bread and butter sandwiches, strawberry fluff, coffee.

My Own Recipes.
A chafing dish is practical for many reasons. The college girl knows its worth and will never starve or grow thin operating one. But the busy housekeeper will also learn that many dishes may be adapted to its use and serve Sunday night suppers and many a supper on hot summer evenings from the chafing dish.

Chicken à la Reine.
2 cups diced cooked chicken.
1/2 cup mushrooms.
1 cup asparagus tips.
1 cup minced pimientos.
4 tablespoons butter.

3 cups milk.

1 teaspoon salt.

Paprika.

Melt butter in blazer placed directly over flame. Stir in flour and add milk slowly. Boil and remaining ingredients and keep hot over hot water in the water pan. Serve on hot toast. All ingredients should be measured and prepared in the kitchen.

Asparagus Eggs.

3 cups milk.

4 tablespoons butter.

3 tablespoons flour.

1 cup grated cheese.

1 teaspoon salt.

Paprika.

1 1/2 cups asparagus tips.

6 eggs.

Make a sauce of the butter, flour, milk and cheese in the blazer directly over flame. Add asparagus and set dish in water pan. When very hot add the eggs as poached.

FARMERS WANT VOICE IN PARTY

Will Present Principles at Two Political Conventions This Summer

CHICAGO, May 13.—Recognition for farmers for the platform makers of each of the two great political parties at their June conventions by representatives of farm organizations of the country. This action was decided on at the closing session of the national board of farm organizations meeting.

According to Charles A. Lyman, national secretary of the board, it was the general opinion of the delegates that the food producers of the country never had received the attention of either the Republican or Democratic party to which they were entitled. It was their purpose, he said, to send representatives to the Chicago and the San Francisco conventions with demands that they be recognized in the formation of party platforms, and to throw the weight of their support at the November election to the party which gave the greatest consideration to the farmer in the party declaration of principles.

Ten Main Points.
The main points which the farmers will insist on were outlined by R. D. Cooper of Little Falls, N. Y. They follow:

"The right of collective bargaining by agricultural interests, as set forth in the pending Capper-Neftzman bill.

"Conservation of forests, with a view to keeping down the cost to consumers of print paper and lumber.

"Payment of the war debt through direct taxation on those best able to pay," meaning corporations and persons acquiring great wealth during the war.

"Reduction of the high cost of living through elimination of the middleman and provision for more direct dealing with the consumer.

"Appointment of a secretary of agriculture who knows practical farm conditions.

"Legislation prohibiting corporations and individuals acquiring great tracts of land, as a means of reducing farm tenancy.

"Equal rights to corporations and others in transportation facilities.

"Federal control of the packing industry.

"Arrangements for more elastic credits for farmers.

"Opposition to universal military training, if such is to be made a plank of party platforms."

Temple of Agriculture.

The delegates decided to build a temple of agriculture in Washington, where the farmers of every state and representatives of the farm organizations elected by the board may have offices.

eggs, unbroken, cover and allow eggs to set. Serve on hot buttered toast. The eggs may be beaten slightly and added to the sauce and cooked. The dish is not so pretty, though, as when the eggs are poached.

ADAM ON SCREEN AT THE ALHAMBRA

Making Up as First Man a Hard Job

You wouldn't think it would be much trouble for a motion picture actor to make up to play the part of Adam, would you? In reality it is a considerable task. According to science, but first father was probably in point of hirsuteness a close second to the ape. Therefore, when Theodore Kosloff, the noted Russian dancer, started to don his "costume" to impersonate the prototype of the new Robert Warwick picture, "The Tree of Knowledge," which is being shown at the Alhambra theatre today and tomorrow, the process took some four hours of his time.

Realizing the difficulty of his job, Mr. Kosloff appeared at the studio at 4 o'clock in the morning on the day the scenes were to be made. By 8 o'clock he was ready for the camera. It should be explained that every strand of crepe hair had to be attached separately, one by one, in order to secure the most realistic results.

Route Arranged for Zion Canyon Tourists

Forest service reports indicate that a Wylie Way route will be established through Little Zion canyon, arrangements having been made with the Parry brothers of Salt Lake, for a complete tour of the route. Parties will leave Salt Lake for Lund, over the Salt Lake Route, then by stage by way of Cedar, Parowan, and Bear River valley road, to Panquitch, and on to Bryce's canyon. The route will then lead from the south by way of Klappan and the Grand canyon and then back to Fredonia and the Zion national park. The return trip will be from Cedar to Lund.

BIT OF PAPER IN SUBWAY ENDS LOVER'S LONG QUEST

N. E. A. Staff Special NEW YORK, May 13.—Valdimir Olsen of Copenhagen, an officer of the Danish government, was engaged to Helene Anderson.

A year ago they quarreled. Cupid, just around the corner forgot to straighten out their troubles. Miss Anderson left Copenhagen without even saying goodbye.

After painstaking work that would have done credit to a detective, Olsen found she was in New York. So he sailed for America, to find that his quest had only begun. With characteristic Danish patience, he waited.

And then— Standing in the subway one day a letter fluttered at his feet, blown along by the rush of a train. He picked it up.

"Miss Helene Anderson," the address read: "138 W. 53 st."

"The old love came back when I saw Valdimir," says Miss Anderson. "Any man that will search nearly a year for a girl loves her better than anyone else could. Yes, we'll be married."

POLISH COLORS

FLY OVER KIEV

Populace Turns Out to Greet Men Carrying Flowers Instead of Bayonets

KIEV, May 5.—(By courier to Warsaw, May 11. By the Associated Press.)—For the tenth time in less than three years, Kiev today changed hands again.

When Alexander F. Kerensky, then the Russian premier, came in October, 1917, at the head of the anti-Bolshevik forces, Kiev was curious as to the newcomers, and its inhabitants today were just as curious as ever.

Late Friday and early today, when the first detachments of Polish cavalry reached the city, there was a scramble for shelter, most of the people going to their homes and remaining indoors. As the Polish infantry began entering the city this morning, however, curious eyes peeped from every window.

But in the afternoon, as the infantry came in force, singing as it marched with flowers in its rifles instead of bayonets, Kiev's curiosity was again satisfied, and the people began pouring into the thoroughfares.

Tonight, every one, old and young, poor and rich, were out in the streets mingling and talking with the soldiers, whose arms were stacked in the squares.

The Polish colors again are flying near where, centuries ago, the Polish banner was flown by the forces of Boleslaus the Great, Poland's second king. Near the Polish colors at several points there has been placed the flag of the Ukraine, modest in design,
